

CANVASS OF VOTE IS PROGRESSING SLOWLY

DEMOCRATIC AND LEGISLATIVE TICKETS ALL THAT WAS COMPLETED THIS AFTERNOON.

HUTCHINSON A WINNER

By Five Votes Over Carey in Rock County State Senatorial Race—Canvass County Returns Tomorrow.

Canvass of the vote cast at the primary election on Tuesday was begun at the county clerk's office this morning and continued slowly as the result of the additional work required by the second choice law. At three o'clock this afternoon the democratic state and legislative vote had been canvassed and work was begun on the republican state vote. It was expected that this would be completed tonight.

That will leave the entire county vote on all tickets and the vote on legislative offices on the republican ticket, state senate and assembly, to be canvassed tomorrow. It is doubtful whether everything can be finished tomorrow as the three cornered contest on the republican ticket will make progress exceedingly slow.

The board of canvassers which is composed of County Clerk, Howard W. Lee, J. C. McEvoy of Beloit, and J. A. Denning of Janesville, began their work at nine o'clock this morning. The results which were totaled today are of interest to democratic voters, the principal contest the result of which has heretofore not been announced unofficially being that for state senator in which James F. Hutchinson of Janesville, defeated Edward M. Carey of Beloit by a majority of five votes. Hutchinson received 363 votes and Carey 358.

On the state ticket the results were as follows: For Governor, John C. Karel, 747 and Adolph J. Schmitz, 152; for lieutenant-governor, Harry Bolens, 477 and Henry A. Moehlpab, 312; for secretary of state, Andrew P. Kealy, 585; for state treasurer, George J. Leonard, 494 and Nicholas Schmidt, 234; for attorney general, John F. Doherty, 490 and Chas. A. Kading, 259.

In the vote for assemblymen, first and second districts, in which there was no contest, the vote stood, for Alexander Paul, 386, first district, and for Chas. Oliver, 254 second district. Reports received from Walworth county today stated that some of the returns were defective and most of today was spent in solving the difficulties so that no results could be obtained. The state board of canvassers meet next Tuesday and the results of the county canvass must be in Madison by that time.

Johnson Leads. Madison, Sept. 6.—Henry Johnson is leading in the race for state treasurer according to reports he has received. In addition to the lead of 2,000 which he claimed yesterday he has received more reports today and he claims he has carried Eau Claire by 550, Dunne, by 24, Dane by 100. He lost Brown county by 400 and Green by 10.

Ingram Out. Speaker Charles A. Ingram of Durand concedes his probable defeat for the nomination as member of congress in the new tenth district. He issued a statement endorsing progressive principles and thanking those who supported him.

FOUR PARTIES MUST HOLD CONVENTIONS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 6.—Interest has already begun to center in the four state conventions to be held here on Sept. 17th. According to law each of the four political parties on the ballot—democratic, republican, social democratic, and prohibition—must hold their state convention on this date, to formulate a platform and elect members of a state central committee. In each of these conventions the nominees for senate and assembly, the hold-over senators and the state officers are credited delegates. In both the democratic and republican conventions there will be 138 delegates, which includes the 132 senators and assemblymen and the five state officers.

Aside from drafting the platform, which, according to the law must be announced before six o'clock on Sept. 18th, the convention will elect a state chairman and members of a state central committee to push the campaign in every district in the state. It is the present plan to hold the republican convention in the assembly chamber at the capitol, and some work has already been started in the drafting of material for a state platform. Those in close touch with the republican situation here declare there will be a strong plank explaining the record of the party in this state and asking the extension of those principles throughout the nation. It is planned to have a plank favoring the principle of collecting taxes according to people's ability to pay, the idea embraced in the income tax law. There will be a plank endorsing the work of the industrial commission, and the compensation act which is accomplishing much in the protection of labor. There will be a plank demanding legislation to prevent the exploitation of water powers for the benefit of large trusts and special interests. Another plank will demand legislation for reasonable fire insurance rates without discrimination. Some recent statistics collected indicate that the fire insurance profits of the poor while low rates have been given big manufacturing plants.

INTEREST SHIFTS IN THE ROSENTHAL CASE

Inspector Hayes Arraigned to Make Good Threats Against Waldo This Morning.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Sept. 6.—Interest in the Rosenthal case shifted today from the criminal court to the police headquarters where Cornelius G. Hayes, the deposed police inspector, was today placed on trial charged with making false statements regarding Police Commissioner Waldo. District Attorney Whitman announced his intention of being present.

There is much speculation as to whether Hayes will make good when he takes the stand, the statements attributed to him, notably that he would reveal departmental secrets embarrassing to the commissioner.

Although Hayes denied yesterday that he said he would force Waldo to resign within twenty-four hours, he has not repudiated one of the features of his conference with District Attorney Whitman and he is still expected to be the chief witness at the John Doe inquiry into the police situation.

Commissioner Waldo testified that he called before him on Aug. 16th the various inspectors to ascertain which one of them, if any, had given an anonymous interview published that day to the effect that orders had been given by Waldo that no disorderly houses should be raided without his instruction.

Commissioner Waldo vigorously denied he had given orders other than the general instructions to observe peace and good order and to enforce the law.

The relationship between Mayor Gaynor and the New York police department; the mayor's attitude and the city's so-called vice and excise problems and the treatment to which the department followed his public declaration of his attitude formed the basis of a relentless cross-examination undergone by police commissioner Waldo today in the trial of Cornelius G. Hayes, an inspector suspended on charges of making false statements reflecting on the commissioner.

"Does not Mayor Gaynor direct your policy toward vice?" he was asked.

"He does not," snapped the commissioner.

"Don't you know that the mayor's views on vice are that we have to suffer this evil?"

"I don't know anything about the mayor's views except what he told me; he never told me anything like that."

"You knew, did you, that disorderly houses had flourished for six months in Inspector Hayes' district? That these houses were operating every day and were not being raided?"

"Yes, I knew it. I knew disorderly houses had been flourishing in that district for a year, but I presume Inspector Hayes was making every effort he could to close them up."

PENDERGAST AGREES TO BE A CANDIDATE

New York Comptroller Finally Assents To Let His Name Be Presented As Candidate For Governor.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Comptroller William Pendergast of New York still looms large as the candidate for governor at the progressive state convention. It was reported that when the session was called this afternoon to take up the state ticket, his would be the only name presented.

After a conference with Comptroller Pendergast, Mr. Woodruff announced that the comptroller had agreed to permit his name to be presented to the convention with those of other candidates including Chairman Hutchins. Thus the situation was construed by the delegates to have narrowed down to a contest on the convention floor between the supporters of Mr. Pendergast and the state chairman, although other candidates may be named to head the ticket.

GENERAL M'ARTHUR SUDDENLY STRICKEN GIVING AN ADDRESS

Widow of Milwaukee Army Officer Prostrated And Captain Parsons Suffers Paralytic Stroke As A Result.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 6.—Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, widow of General Arthur MacArthur, Lieut. General of the army, U. S. A. retired, who became unconscious when informed of the sudden death of her husband, following an apoplectic stroke while addressing a banquet of his old regiment, the 24th Wisconsin Volunteers, is today resting as well as can be expected, according to physicians in attendance.

Captain E. B. Parsons, toastmaster at the banquet, who suffered a paralytic stroke following the shock incident to the sudden death of General MacArthur, is reported to be resting comfortably at his home this forenoon, and it is said that he probably will be able to leave his bed within the next few days.

General MacArthur died suddenly last night following an apoplectic stroke with which he was suddenly stricken while addressing the banquet of his old Wisconsin war veterans, the 24th Wisconsin Volunteers, known as "The Chamber of Commerce" regiment at the E. J. Wilcox post headquarters, the occasion being the 50th anniversary of the day of the 24th Wisconsin regiment left Milwaukee for the front. Of over 700 original members about one hundred survivors attended the festivities.

General MacArthur had been introduced by Toastmaster, Captain E. B. Parsons, his companion all through the civil war, following the address of W. B. Bishop of the Chamber of Commerce, and had been talking only a few minutes telling of the famous march through Georgia, when he paused and remarked, "Comrades, I am too weak to proceed." He then sank down and his head fell on the table and death followed almost instantly. Scarcely had the tragic announcement of the sudden death of General MacArthur been made when Captain Parsons, who a few minutes before had introduced his life long friend and comrade to the banquet, all forward himself stricken with paralysis.

General Chas. King, a life long friend and comrade of General MacArthur, headed a committee which informed Mrs. MacArthur of her husband's death. With the breaking of the sad news the widow swooned and remained unconscious during the greater part of the night.

An especially pathetic incident was enacted when the comrades attending the banquet were informed of the death of the old comrade. With bowed heads and tears trickling down their cheeks the gray-haired veterans led by Rev. Chas. B. Jenkins, repeated the Lord's Prayer and the banquet came to a sudden end, following the announcement of the passing away of General MacArthur.

While no definite announcement has been made of the funeral, it is expected that it will take place Wednesday afternoon and will be of a private and simple character in keeping with a previously expressed wish of General MacArthur.

Officers Services. Washington, Sept. 6.—Adjutant General Andrews today telegraphed to Mrs. MacArthur and the two sons of the dead officer, Captain Douglas MacArthur, U. S. A. at Fort Leavenworth and Lieut. Commander Arthur Jr., at the naval war college at Newport, R. I., to learn their wishes about participation of the army in the funeral service. The death of General MacArthur leaves four lieutenant generals of the United States army surviving, all retired, Generals Miles, Young, Chaffee and Bates.

Miss Frances Ford Who Gave 80 Page Revelation of West Hammond Vice Conditions, Recovers From Breakdown.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Miss Frances Ford, whose 80 page revelation of vice in the village of West Hammond, Ill., is expected to be the basis of prosecution of the alleged "vice ring" of the town today, and was said to be recovering from her nervous breakdown today to seek information which would substantiate the allegation made by the Ford girl, who was an inmate of a resort by Henry Foss, in whose place Henry Messmaker, an alleged victim of poison died.

The girl's statement that the contents of a "black bottle" which was kept behind the bar in the place was given to frequenters of the resort when heavily under the influence of liquor is to be particularly inquired into on the theory that "knock out drops" might have caused Messmaker's death.

Digging for the bodies of victims of wholesale murders in West Hammond a suburb of Chicago, may be decided upon as a result of the investigation into vice conditions said to exist in that town under the leadership of Miss Virginia Brooks, the young settlement worker and suffragette, whose activity during the past two years have attracted wide attention.

PARIS MAKES THE WOMEN'S STYLES BUT LONDON MAKES THE MEN'S

By J. R. HAMILTON
Former Advertising Manager
Wanamaker's, Philadelphia.

Lun'on, dear old Lun'on is no joke when it comes to the styles for men. But where Paris has twenty famous creators of women's styles, London has but one for men.

Poole of London has been the one great creator of men's attire for almost a generation.

On this side of the water we love to play at our own creations and pretend that they are our own. But when it comes to a downright change of style, we sneak over to the other side, drop our "h's" or don our monocles, according to our idea of English gentility, and consult the oracle.

Well, it is autumn now. Poole has spoken, American makers have listened again and the results are being advertised.

Today every American manufacturer has reproduced the London styles and every good dealer is showing them. For the sake of our own pride, we modify those English styles into our American idea. But we get the inspiration from the "other" side and down in our hearts we know it.

And what are these latest styles?

Alas you will have to look at the pictures in our advertising columns to find out. One can describe a woman's suit, but not a man's. In a hundred rapid words one woman can tell another exactly how to make the latest Paris gown. But if one man tried it on another in men's styles, he'd feel like a fool or a cripple depending on how fast he could run.

No, it cannot be told that way. You will find the advertising of all the latest fall styles for men right in this paper. In most cases you will find it illustrated and if you study it carefully, you will know exactly what you should wear this fall. And wherever the merchant has not given you pictures to go by, he has given you the best description he could and has left it for the real articles in his windows to do the rest.

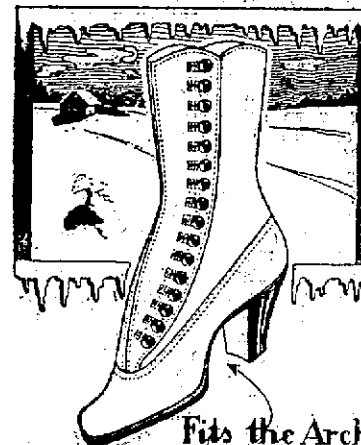

So you see it is absolutely necessary from now on to read the men's clothing ads in this paper. Because if you don't read them carefully, and if you do buy your suit at any old place you happen to run into, you are very apt to find yourself wearing this season what most men wore last fall.

Besides, men's styles are worth knowing about this year.

WAGGONER CLEARED OF ROBBERY CHARGE

FOUND GUILTY OF RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY BY JURY THIS AFTERNOON.

SENTENCE NOT PASSED

Charles Pierce, Attorney for Defendant Moves Verdict Be Set Aside —Hearing Tomorrow Morning.

Hugh Waggoner, early this afternoon, was found not guilty of robbing Robert Denner of a gold watch and $50.00 on the night of August 17, but was found guilty of receiving stolen property worth $5.00, according to the verdict of the jury drawn in the case. This verdict was at once called in question by Charles Pierce, attorney for the defendant, who asked that it be set aside on the ground that it was not in accordance with the evidence presented and contrary to it. He was given until nine o'clock tomorrow morning to submit the authorities, in support of his contention to the court. The jury was at once discharged.

The case of the State versus Hugh Waggoner was called at nine o'clock this morning. Judge Charles Elford read his charge to the jury, all the evidence in the case and the pleas of the attorneys having been heard yesterday afternoon, and the jury was sent out to determine on its verdict. At ten-thirty o'clock the jury asked that Judge Elford repeat his charge to the jury, and this done it returned its verdict. The jury was then closeted again at one o'clock and brought in its verdict at 2:25 p. m. It did not give a specific finding on the first count, that of robbery, the innocence of the accused on that count being inferred.

That Waggoner was in the company until twelve o'clock on the night of August 17, was testified to by Mr. Dobrotz and Charles Hell, who were called to the witness stand immediately after the witnesses for the state had been heard. They stated that they met Waggoner early that evening and were on the streets until ten o'clock when they went into Knipp's saloon, had a few drinks and played cards until the saloon was closed at one o'clock. They then went to Barry's pool hall, played one game of pool, and were about to start another when Waggoner complained of not feeling well and went out into the open air. Dobrotz and Hell then went with Waggoner to the Schmidley restaurant for a lunch. While they were eating Waggoner got up and went outside. His companions saw him all that time sitting on the front door step. As they left the restaurant they chatted with him for a short time. At about twelve o'clock Dobrotz and Hell started to go home down High street, and Waggoner, on West Milwaukee street.

Patrolman Harry Smith testified that he saw Waggoner in front of the Schmidley restaurant at 11:15 o'clock. He spoke to him because he thought he had fallen asleep. Waggoner got up and walked down High street and he had got as far as the alley to the rear of the restaurant when Smith last saw him. This was about the time Denner was robbed.

The defendant when called to the stand, gave an account of his actions after leaving Hell and Dobrotz. He had first gone to his boarding house on Linn street and retired. Not being able to sleep he arose, dressed, and went down town. Until about two o'clock he sat up with Mr. Conell in his restaurant opposite the Northwestern depot. Then feeling somewhat better he started for home. At the Wisconsin Carriage Company's corner he met a stranger who asked him for the "making" of a cigarette, which he gave him. This man he described as about five feet, six inches in height and weighing about 120 or 125 pounds. After he had given him a cigarette he showed him a watch which he offered to sell him. He bought the watch for one dollar.

Marele Stanford and Frank Fathers were put on the stand and told of what had occurred behind the Croak brewery on the Monday afternoon following the robbery. One of the party drew out his watch to note the time of the day, and Waggoner did likewise. One of the men there offered Waggoner two dollars for the watch which he refused.

CASE ARISING FROM AUTO ACCIDENT WAS SETTLED

Action Brought By A. A. Russell Against David A. Drummond Adjusted Out of Court.

As the result of the accident in which a car belonging to the Russell hack and baggage line was overturned by the automobile of David A. Drummond at the corner of Wall and North Academy streets on August 4, suit against Mr. Drummond had been commenced by A. A. Russell for $71 damages, $61 for the cost of repairs to the hack and $10 for the loss of the use of the hack for ten days while it was being repaired. The case was originally brought in the justice court of Charles H. Lange, and was taken on a change of venue to Justice Stanley Tallman's court. The hearing was set for ten o'clock this morning in Justice Tallman's court and witnesses had been subpoenaed for the hearing, but a settlement was effected out of court.

Judgment Given.

In the case of H. J. Baker against Morris Reed judgment for the sum of $36.28 was given when the case was heard in Justice Stanley Tallman's court yesterday. The action was brought to recover the amount alleged to be due the plaintiff for the purchase of nursery stock in the spring of 1911.

Port Snap Shots

Col. Robert Lee Hedges, owner of the St. Louis Browns, is beginning to feel better and reckons he won't sell his stock, after all. When St. Louis did such poor work early in the season the colonel got discouraged and said he was going to get out of the baseball business. The recent spurt of the Browns has given him new heart. Brown stock is not now on sale.

The success of the Boston Red Sox this year means a whole lot to two individuals, namely James McAleer and Robert McCoy. These gents own a half interest in the club, having bought it last year. McAleer has been a loyal American league man from the very beginning. He was a star center fielder years ago and has acted as manager of the St. Louis Browns and the Washington Senators. McCoy's progress in baseball has been rapid. He was secretary of the American league for some years.

Manager John Gangel of the Rochester club, international league, is beginning to wonder if he didn't make a mistake when he sold off two of his best players recently. Shortstop McMillen and Outfielder Lelivelt, were sold to the New York Highlanders and since their departure Rochester has lost several games. Now the fans of that town are beginning to fear that Gangel's crowd will not win a fourth successive pennant.

Pendleton, the famous Princeton college football and baseball star, will more than likely be found with the New York Americans after college closes next June, it is said. Manager Wolpert would like mighty well to get Pendleton and it is understood the latter has practically agreed to join the Yankees next year.

If you're looking for a real soft job, don't hire out to a major league manager to pick promising material from any of the clubs in the Southern league this year. The south, which has produced so many of the stars now in the majors, seems to have fallen down this season. The most promising player in the southern circuit is Tommy Hendryx, of New Orleans. There are probably not more than three or four other men in the league who will get tryouts with big league teams.

Tommy Gibbons, of St. Paul, brother of Mike, will soon be on his way to New York, where he will cast his hat into the ring for the middleweight championship. Mike, who is some fighter himself and who ought to know another fighter when he sees one, is enthusiastic over his kid brother. He says Tom has a kick like the proverbial mule and warns all to be careful to keep vital parts covered whenever facing the young starter under Stanley Ketchel's crown.

Bill Carrigan is winning the plaudits of fandom over in Boston. Bill is catcher for the Red Sox, and has won the happy distinction of being regarded as the most valuable man on the team.

A Cleveland sport writer, in discussing the Red Sox the other day gave six reasons why Carrigan should be regarded as the greatest hero of them all:

- 1—He has trained and is the boss of the most efficient pitching corps in the world.
- 2—He is the schemer, the dictator and the master of the Red Sox defensive play.
- 3—He is one of the schemers and the dictators and the masters of the Red Sox offensive play.
- 4—His are the "inside baseball" brains of the coming pennant winners.
- 5—Besides being the "Man Behind the Bat" he is the "Power Behind the Boss."
- 6—He is the most successful backstop in baseball.

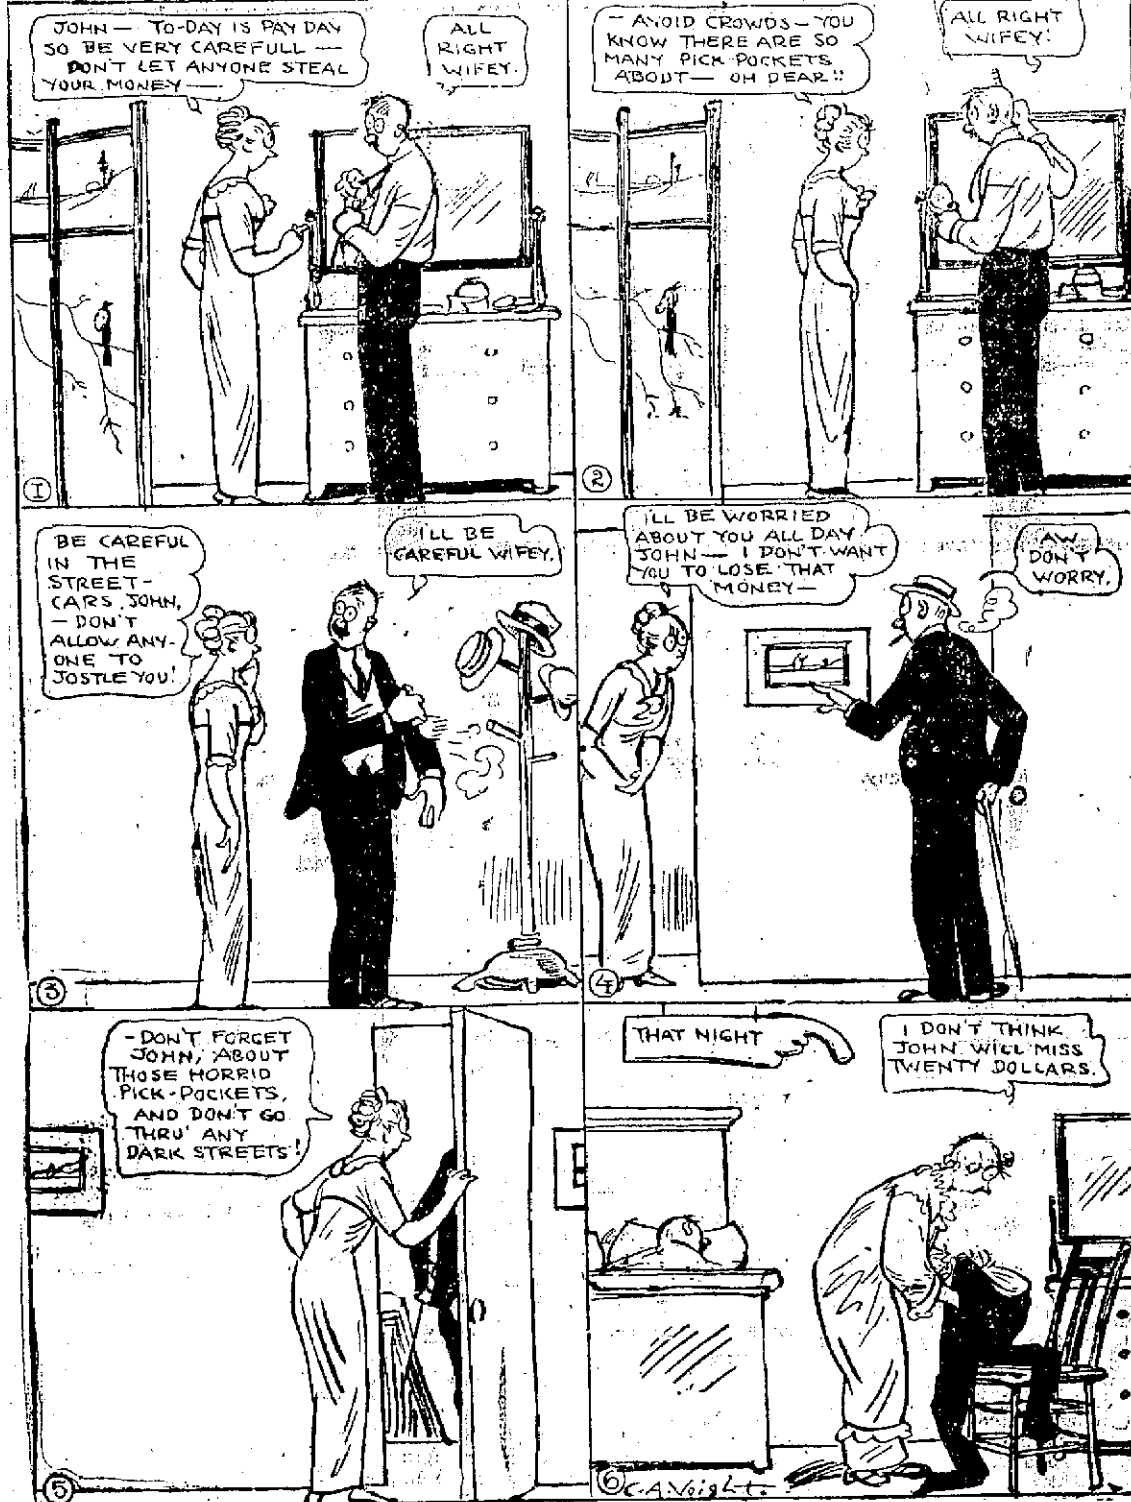

millionaire New York Sportsman, winner of a half a dozen national truck and road races, who will pilot a Fiat in the Grand Prix, on Tuesday and in the Vanderbilt Cup race on Saturday. Close on his heels came the famous Italian, Ralph De Palma, who on last Saturday accomplished the rare feat of winning two big road races in one day, taking down the Elgin National trophy and the rich free-for-all on the Elgin course.

Bragg established his downtown headquarters at the garage of the Kompter Motor Car company, representing the Fiat, before noon, while De Palma at once quartered his Mercedes and racing paraphernalia at the Rambler garage. This afternoon both will select their field headquarters along the Vanderbilt cup race course, whence they will move at the beginning of next week for a long stay to be ended by the finish of the Vanderbilt cup race on September 21. David Bruce-Brown and Teddy Tetzlaff, who with Bragg will form the battery of contestants representing the Italian Fiat factory in the Milwaukee races, are expected to arrive on Friday.

The entry of six cars by two well known manufacturers last night brings the list of cars which will compete here well into the fifties. The Mason Automobile Co., of Mason City, Ia., came in with nominations for four cars, three to run in the Wisconsin Motor Challenge race and one in the Babst Blue Ribbon contest, which will be staged on the same day, Friday, September 20. The J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company of Racine sent the entries of two Case cars for the Vanderbilt cup races.

VANDERBILT RACES WILL BE BEST EVER

Milwaukee Promoters Make Elaborate Preparations For Automobile Races—Fortune Spent On Track.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 6.—Seldom have arrangements for auto racing been on a more elaborate scale than the preparations for the Vanderbilt Cup program to be held here September 17th, 20th and 21st.

The three days' program begins Tuesday Sept. 17, with the $10,000 American Grand Prix over a distance of 410 miles and winds up Saturday, Sept. 21st, with the Vanderbilt Cup Race of 306 miles.

More than sixty of the most widely known foreign and American cars and race drivers will fight for fame and to secure the $20,500 in cash hung up by the Milwaukee Dealers' Association in addition to about an equal sum in gold, trophies and accessories.

Spurred on by the determination to place Milwaukee on the racing map, the promoters of the meet have spent the seven mile Wauwatosa course and it is said that the course is the fastest of its kind in the country. There are four long straight away courses and only four turns. Each of these turns has been given a broad sweep and it is expected that there will be little slackening of speed by the drivers on the turns.

Ralph De Palma, Irwin Bergdoll, and Ralph Mulford, who furnished a three cornered contest at the recent Elgin races are all entered. Pittod against them are David V. Brown, twice winner of the American Grand Prix, Teddy Tetzlaff, Hughie Hughes, Spencer Wishart, Caleb Bruggs and other noted drivers.

Among the foreign cars entered will be three Pugeot, three Fiat, three Benz, two Mercedes, a Rault, an Isotta and a Metallurgite.

The Vanderbilt Cup Prix is first, the trophy and $2,000; second $2,000; third $1,000; and fourth $500. Entries close for the grand prix Sept. 10th and for all the other races Sept. 14th.

FORTY RESPOND TO CALL FOR PLAYERS

Coach Curtis Gratified With Showing For High School Eleven As Indicated by Number at Meeting.

A meeting was called by Coach Curtis at the high school this morning for the purpose of securing football material for the coming season. A squad of forty men answered the call. Coach Curtis asked the opinion of several of the old men on how the games should be arranged, assuming that a light team be played first so as to give the men a good practice, and still to keep in good condition until the stronger teams are played.

A letter was received from Northwestern Military Academy at Lake Geneva, Wis., asking for a game to be played there early in the season. No action has been taken as yet.

last year, and the people of Janesville may be able to boast of a whirlwind team before the season closes.

Practice will be held on Monday afternoon whatever the weather may be. Coach Curtis thought it might be well to suspend practice if the weather remains the same, but the squad are willing to work, and all are anxious to don the mole skins for the first practice.

SCHOOL DISMISSED EARLY ON ACCOUNT OF HEAT

Owing to the extreme heat yesterday afternoon, students at the high school and various ward schools were dismissed a half hour earlier than usual. The four afternoon periods were each shortened ten minutes. Seats were assigned to the high school students yesterday and today.

The seniors were given their places yesterday and the members of the other classes were assigned seats at noon today.

A special meeting of the Rusk Lyceum was called at noon today by President Harold Mohr.

THE TAX-EATERS' CONSPIRACY.
"The income tax is a magnificent thing—for the many hundreds of tax-eaters who administer the law. To them it is of vital importance. It is their bread and butter—their very sustenance. Of course they will defend it. And they are defending it with a zeal that evinces utter vulgar desperation. Every vestige of the decorous treatment of honorable Wisconsin citizens is thrown aside. Private affairs are exposed to the world with complete indifference to the commonest decencies. The financial weakness of the small dealer or manufacturer is laid open to his devouring rival. No longer is a particle of fiscal privacy left to the citizen who chances to have Wisconsin for his home. And for what is all this brutal, un-American conduct? Merely for more taxes to be spent! Just that! In the legislature when the bill was under consideration promises were abundant from the theorists advocating the act that income taxes would reduce other kinds of taxation. They were false! Simply we get more taxes with which public officials may feed their growing extravagance. That's all there is to it—except the creation of a vast political tax machine, with fattening agents in every bailiwick that must be sustained from the new tax!"—Madison Democrat.
This is a plain statement of cold facts and the success of Judge Karel at the polls last Tuesday is due to the fact that he favored the repeal or radical modification of this obnoxious law. His majority would have been largely increased but for the fact that thousands of republicans who desired to support him, were barred from voting a split ticket, and the light vote for McGovern indicates that many of them declined to support the state ticket.
But there are other questions more important than the income tax, which has simply served as the last straw to break the camel's back. One of them is extravagance of administration, which is largely responsible for the heavy increase in taxes.
It is always well to look conditions squarely in the face and these are the conditions which now confront us. The tax budget is a cold, stubborn fact, which we, the taxpayers, are obliged to provide for. The income tax is simply a make-shift, and after the cost of administration, the net returns will not make much impression on the budget.
This means that state taxes of all kinds must be necessarily higher, and somebody has got to pay the freight. You and I are the victims, and will continue to be until we take the bull by the horns and call a halt.
It is a financial problem of more importance than parties of whatever brand, and should be the one and only issue, in the state campaign. A high tax rate means more than individual burdens. It means the crippling of industries and the destruction of prosperity.
The state, during the past decade, has gone daffy on reform, and the chickens are coming home to roost. We have been blind idolaters, and in our infatuation have overlooked the important question of where the money was coming from to pay the fiddler.
The man who captured us was not a financier. His only ability, along that line, was in the direction of the state university, and this was freely exploited.
For the first time, during the hypnotic spell, the rank and file of taxpayers are asking the serious question, "Where are we at?" And the answer that comes back is not very consoling. We are facing an expense account of a million dollars a month, with but little to show for the investment.
The claim is made by Colonel Roosevelt that 1912 will witness the death of the two old parties, and that in their place will come into existence the Progressive and Conservative organizations.
The primary law has already destroyed the parties in Wisconsin, and the state is ripe for an advance movement. We have had our fill of modern progressivism and by the time the bills are paid, will be satisfied to rest under the wing of any sort of an organization that promises relief.
WHICH?
Are you a hero worshiper or a lover of principles?
Do you believe in the republican party, which has a record of achievement since 1833 that is more glorious than that of any party on the earth, or do you stand for one man?
Do you believe in the idea that the views of many are better than the notions of one?
Do you stand for the prosperity that the republican party has brought and that is now beginning to flood this country with its beneficent results, or do you, in the face of the returning prosperity, want to take a chance on something else?
Do you believe in truth and in friendship, or do you stand for broken promises and treachery to a party and to a friend?
Does your admiration for a man who may change his opinion diametrically opposite to the one he holds today count for more than a party creed and a party record?
In the plainest English, is it to be a party or a man that you will follow this fall?—Auburn (N. Y.) Advertiser.
These plain questions will command attention when the people take time for sober second thought. The slogan of the Roosevelt campaign, "We want Teddy," represents enthusiasm for the man, inspired by his strong personality and his fighting qualities. When he "shied his hat in the ring" the crowds cheered because they were assured of a first-class exhibition, and they are not disappointed.
His reception at the Minnesota state fair yesterday was like the reception of a champion at the ring side, and the shout, "We want Teddy," expressed the feeling of blind adoration which influenced his audience.
This feeling prevails, to greater or less extent, throughout the country, but more especially in some of the western states. Some of the people who are shouting for the man, would be satisfied to see him installed in the White House for the rest of his natural life.
The time may come when that sort of a monarchy will be necessary, for the republic has not yet passed the experimental stage and the disposition is growing to sacrifice parties and organization, to individual leadership. If this policy is pursued the one man power will develop rapidly and government will soon be in the hands of a czar. The office of president should be held for a single term of six years. The third term proposition is dangerous because we are hero worshipers, and our heroes are not equal to the strain.
With July weather in September, and a bumper crop already secured, everybody ought to be happy, and the political manager, now touring the country, should do a flourishing business. The tariff must be revised downward except and always that "my" particular industry must not be disturbed. The cost of living must be reduced, and this must be done without a decline in prices on anything in which "I" am interested. Yet the sun shines on, and it's "hot."
The barbarous treatment of convicts by the officers in charge of the Michigan state prison, reads like a chapter from the history of the 18th century. The men had been rebellious, but not without cause. They doubtless deserved punishment, but torture was not demanded. The state of Michigan will do well to reform the management of her state institutions.
The treasurer of the state of New York has received about nine million dollars, during the first eight months of 1912, for corporation taxes, with nearly two thousand concerns yet to report. All the state lacks is an income tax to be on a par with the most progressive state in the union.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

Things That Make Life Worth Living.
Making love to your best girl and just as you are about to pop the question, leaving her ask you why your nose is red, why you wear glasses, whether the Cubs won today or not or whether you think it is going to be an unusually cold summer.
Getting a package of feminine underwear from the laundry by mistake just as you are about to leave on a two weeks' trip.
Having your name spelled wrong in the newspaper when you have stopped a runaway and saved three lives.
Having someone start a conversation about Waterloo when you don't care whether he is an actor, a disease or a new brand of breakfast food.
Listening to a dinner-table story you have heard for nineteen years and trying to look as though you enjoyed it.
The Fat Man's Soliloquy.
That's right laugh, laugh loud and long.
You long, lean, lank attenuated specimen of humanity.
Who cannot cast a shadow
And who shiver to death in the winter.
And regard us fat folks then with keenest envy.
Laugh, doggone you, laugh! Have a good time: Crack your ribs. It's your turn now—Go ahead.
Give us the equine ha-ha.
Laugh, doggone you, laugh!
Laugh, while you can; Chuckle, grin, giggle.
Point your long bony finger at this upholstered frame.
And smile at this all too solid flesh.
Your period of merriment is brief. Then will come the north wind.
Cracking around your sly-like frame.
Beating a tattoo upon your spare ribs.
And your knees will rattle.
Even as the end man's bones.
And you will shiver.
Like unto the aspen.
Then, doggone you, We'll laugh!
Answers to Correspondents.
Father—You say your son shows signs of becoming a writer and ask what is the best course to pursue. Were it not for the rather stringent laws in this state we might suggest chloroform. As it is, you will have to do the best you can and try to talk him out of it.
Interested—You ask us our idea of the champion mollycoddle and we do not mind stating that in our opinion the champion mollycoddle is the man who lets his wife pick out his smoking tobacco.
Lover—Yes, we can tell you the best way to write love letters. Buy a bottle of invisible ink and write your letter; just before you mail it to her carefully tear it into small bits and place it in the kitchen stove.

Heart to Heart Talks.
By EDWIN A. NYE.
STILWELL'S DREAM.
There is a man in Kansas City whose name is Stilwell.
He dreamed a dream.
His dream was an air line of steel from the grainfields of the middle west direct to the gulf. People smiled. The moneycrats of Wall street laughed.
But—
When American financiers turned their backs on Stilwell's vision of shining rails from Kansas City to the sea the dreamer went to Holland and told his dream to the Dutch capitalists. They furnished the money, and the Kansas City and Southern railroad was built.
Stilwell's dream came true.
To be sure, the author and builder of the road in the outcome was cheated out of his hard earned share, but the road is there doing business as the direct realization of Stilwell's dream.
And again the financiers pronounced his dream a baseless fabric, impractical and absurd. They would not put a dollar in the enterprise.
But Stilwell went about to make his other dream come true.
This was the dream:
He would build a railroad from Kansas City through Mexico to the gulf. It was the old dream from a new viewpoint. Stilwell's vision was again the benign one of connecting the great granaries of the west with tidewater, thereby saving the farmers the long haul transportation.
He dared to cut the parallels of latitude.
He was like that czar of Russia who laid down his ruler between two great cities and, despite the remonstrances of engineers, said, "Build it on that line."
Somehow Stilwell is getting the money, and the Kansas City and Orient railroad is largely built.
Often times your dreamer is the utilitarian. His vision makes things come to pass.
There must first be the dream.
Columbus dreamed of the other side of the world and found it. Napoleon dreamed of an empire and won it.
With their natural eyes men see only little things; they dream of big things.
It is the dreamer who hangs the impossible bridge over the spanless chasm, lays a path for thought on ocean's bottom, discovers the new land, sends the message through the viewless air.
"Where there is no vision the people perish." Therefore the seer.
Between Girls.
"I haven't received a love letter from Jack in three days. I think it's a shame. I shall be positively ill unless I get a love letter by tomorrow."
"Well, my dear," said the other girl, "if you need a love letter from Jack as badly as that, I have 40 or 50 I'll be glad to let you have."

The Benefit of Temptation

Overcome by the Grace of God, Which Brings One Into Closer Fellowship With Christ.

If we were not tempted, we would lose much of the deep sympathy we have one for another. It also has a very humbling effect, driving us direct to the Lord for deliverance. We would not know what a wonderful Savior we had were we not humbled by the devil.

Alexander Whyte, speaking on this subject, says: "Luther, speaking to the young preacher of his day, said: 'I did not learn to preach Christ all at once. The Devil has been my best professor of exegetical and experimental divinity. Before that great schoolmaster took me in hand, I was a sucking child, and not a grown man. It was my combats with sin and with Satan that made me a true minister of the New Testament. It is always a great grace to me, and to my people, for me to be able to say to them, I know this text to be true! I know it for certain to be true! Without incessant combat, and pain, and sweat, and blood, no ignorant stripling of a student ever yet became a powerful preacher.' So says one of the most powerful preachers that ever entered the Pauline pulpit."—Living Water.

No man can know the depths of his own nature or understand his weaknesses and needs until he has been thoroughly tested by the fires of temptation. And no man can know by experience the power of divine grace until he has learned to conquer temptation by the grace of God. It is only in the crucible of temptation that the human heart and spirit can be purified, and it is only by overcoming temptation that a strong spiritual manhood or womanhood can be developed. One who has never been tested by any severe temptation cannot know whether there is any real backbone to his character or not.

Therefore we all need to be brought into contact with temptation. We need to be tempted, as Jesus was, on all sides of our nature. But we all meet with temptation enough in our journey through life without seeking it, or putting ourselves in the way of it unnecessarily. We all need every particle of will-power we possess, and all the grace that God is able to bestow upon us, to overcome the temptations which we must meet; and if we desire to win in the fight, we must carefully avoid all temptations that we can avoid without neglect of duty. We must think of temptation as a thing to be feared, and must pray earnestly to be saved from it, or to be enabled to resist it.

Paul says, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall. There hath no temptation taken you but such as man can bear; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation make also the way of escape, that ye may be able to endure it." We can depend upon God's strength to support us in our hours of weakness and of temptation. If we are striving to live in communion with God and to do his will. If we trust at all in the strength of our own character as a protection against temptation it will inevitably fail us in the time of our greatest need.

That was Peter's mistake. He was so confident of his own courage and steadfastness that even after Jesus had warned him he asseverated his own reliability, saying "Though all men should deny thee, yet will I never." God allowed Satan to tempt Peter, and to gain a great victory over him by forcing him to deny his Lord in the most solemn manner, in order to destroy Peter's self-confidence that he might learn to trust in the grace of God alone. And Peter was a stronger and truer man and a more devoted disciple ever after because of his terrible fall.

Many a weak and sorely tested disciple has become so conscious of his own weakness and lack of faith in the time of temptation that he has almost lost heart, and yet, by just holding on, even as by the skin of his teeth, he has won a victory by the grace of God which has brought him into closer fellowship with Christ.

Two Phases of "Social Service."

"Social service" is an alliterative and fluent phrase which is often heard in these times. It commonly means service for the body, food, for the hungry, clothes for the naked, and coal for the shivering. But is this the only kind of social service that can be rendered? There are multitudes of people who neither hunger nor shiver, but are sad and idle and selfish. What can be done for them? Are not ideals and uplifting influences as much needed today as food and clothes and coal? The church may not be equal to its opportunities, but the opportunity still exists, and the agencies and institutions that can use it are still necessary to a complete life.—The Christian Register.

In Ways of His Leading.

Do I look into the future? Is there much of uncertainty and mystery hanging over it? Trust him—all is marked out for me. Dangers will be averted, bewildering mazes will reveal themselves to be interlaced and inter-leaved with mercy. He leads some times darkly, sometimes sorrowfully, most frequently by crossed and circuitous paths; but ourselves would not have chosen; but always wisely, at ways tenderly.—Rev. J. R. Macduff.

The Japanese Coal Supply.

It is estimated by the Japanese that their coal supplies in the Pushun colliery amount to 800 million tons.

WARM WEATHER WILL MATURE LATE CROPS

Early Tobacco Being Rushed into Sheds While Later Fields Are Benefited by Heat.

While the earlier tobacco crops are being rushed into the sheds the present warm weather is doing wonders for the late tobacco, the growth of which has been somewhat retarded by the continued rains of August. Indications at present are that the late fields will have an abundant yield and will be as fully matured as the early crop which is now being shedded.

The crop this year is reported as the finest ever housed in this state as far as soundness and size of leaf is concerned, says the Edgerton Reporter. Outside of a few hail and storm sections covering possibly about 2,000 acres of the crop and rust that has appeared in some localities, the leaf is unusually free from any blemish that is likely to detract from a perfect binder tobacco. The more forward crops promise also an extraordinarily heavy yield in pounds, making quite certain some fat returns when delivered at the going prices.

Buyers are still thoroughly canvassing the growing districts, but transactions have declined somewhat for the simple reason that the more promising crops are already under contract which includes about everything attractive likely to reach the sheds within the next two or three weeks. Competition is sharp and prices are well maintained for none of the larger growers seem to have their orders filled as yet.

The harvest is proceeding with all possible dispatch with the help at command for the fields have ripened very fast of late. A warm week is bringing along some of the later fields remarkably fast, while others are afflicted with a root disease that puts them entirely out of the reckoning. A few days this week have brought weather conditions that lead to shed burn in the harvested leaf, which growers should watch their sheds closely to avoid.

Hunt for Relatives.

One of the most unique methods of getting a lonely traveler into the hands of her friends was that employed by an agent of the Travelers' Aid society, who found a young woman at one of the railway stations and accompanied her to an address in the Italian quarter of Brooklyn, where she was to join a relative. The relative could not be found, and finally the two women walked slowly along the street, shouting the name of the family which was wanted. The cries at last reached the proper ears, and the wanderer was welcomed.—Christian Herald.

Test of Nerve.

"Colonel," asked the beautiful girl, "when was the most trying moment of your life?" "It was when I went to my wife's father for the purpose of asking him to let me have her. He was very deaf, and I had to explain the matter before twenty clerks."

The Elevating Touch.

"Don't you think music has a refining influence?" "It must have," replied Miss Cayenne. "Some of the popular songs contain language that it would be impossible to employ in any other way."

PUBLIC IS ASKED TO AID IN THE MATTER

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.

The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.

There are any number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.

Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted. All newspapers have this experience.

But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.

The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.

DINNER STORIES

Gen. Grant had left behind him no reputation as a humorist, but he had a dry wit, nevertheless, which was perhaps the more effective for being seldom used. Ex-Senator Depew, of New York, has related one instance of its use.

When Grant was president, a delegation went to Washington to see about getting an appropriation for dredging a certain stream. They called on the president and tried to interest him in the plan.

"Let's see," said Grant, reflectively, didn't I cross that stream in such and such a campaign just before we fought such and such a battle?" "You certainly did, Mr. President," said the spokesman of the delegation, hopefully.

The president was silent for a moment. Then he said: "I remember that stream, but I think you're going the wrong way about to improve it. Why don't you macadamize it?"

The matinee ladies were just crowding into the Times Square subway station the other day when Cus Schiedecker's troubles came to a focus, according to the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times Star. Mr. Schiedecker walked hurriedly through the feminine throng, weeping bitterly and blowing his nose. Then he took a high dive off the platform and snuggled himself over one of the rails. "Come out of that," said Daniel Cornwall, a heavy set and impolite resident of Port Washington. "Come out of that. You'll get hurt."

The despondent Mr. Schiedecker lifted his head from the rail to announce that he wanted to die, that he had thoroughly determined upon dying, and that if the perfect stranger who had addressed him in injurious terms spoke to him again he, Mr. Schiedecker, would lift his nose off Mr. Cornwall leaped into the subway trench and got Mr. Schiedecker by the collar. "Up Dutchman," said he.

AVIATOR MITCHELL IN HIS WRIGHT BIPLANE.

great interest since its first appearance in the city, there was an extra ripple of excitement when it was learned that arrangements were being made for Miss Anna Kueltz, one of the clerks in the dry goods department of the Grange store, to accompany Aviator Mitchell on the four o'clock ascension, Thursday. When all was in readiness Miss Kueltz took her seat in the machine and after a few preliminary whirs and swoops the aeroplane skimmed along the surface of the ground for a few rods and then arose like a bit of thistle down.
They circled around above the grounds, crossing and re-crossing over the heads of the spectators. Although the machine did not rise quite so high as on some previous ascents they remained longer in the air, and from start to finish made a most beautiful flight. Miss Kueltz expressed herself as having passed the most enjoyable experience of her life. After the flight was finished Miss Clara Kueltz, who is an employee in the grocery department of the Grange store, and a niece of Miss Anna, signed a contract to accompany the aviator on the first flight this (Friday) afternoon.

The ball game Thursday afternoon was a long one between Stoughton and Albany, resulting in a score of five to two in favor of Stoughton.

The races yesterday were interesting the first event especially being close. This was finally won in the fifth heat by Baby Boo owned at Baraboo, with A. Wentworth's horse,
Flora W., a strong second. C. T.

The fair management put up a new building of ample size this year to house the poultry exhibit. The new building is one hundred feet long by twenty-eight feet in width with canvas sides and board roof battened, and in this commodious building five hundred and thirty birds are now on exhibition under the very efficient supervision of Mrs. Fred Wilder.

George W. Hackett, pronounced by good authority, one of the best poultry judges the country affords, has judged the exhibits, which fact alone is good assurance that everyone has had fair treatment. Mr. Hackett's long experience and opportunity for wide observation give great weight to his statement that the present exhibit at the Rock county fair is the best poultry show that he has visited this year, and that he has never seen anywhere. The business men of Evansville offered many special premiums on poultry which were awarded as follows:

Two dollars in trade, dry goods department, given by the Evansville Mercantile association, for the best or highest scoring bird at the Rock county fair, all varieties competing, was awarded to M. C. Jarred of

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE SUN DIAL'S MOTTO.

"ONE hour alone is in our hands. The hour on which the shadow stands."—The Sun Dial's Motto. "Next winter when I have more time," I heard a young girl say the other day, "I am going to plan and follow out a regular course of reading."

"Why shall you have more time next winter?" I inquired idly, not intending to question her statement, but to find out her reason for it.

"Why, I don't know. I don't suppose there is any special reason," she answered with a laugh that ended in something like a sigh. "Only somehow one always expects that some day things will be different, and one will have more time to do the things one wants to do and ought to do."

Was ever a truer word spoken in an idle moment? Was there ever a human being who was not deceived by that sweet, illogical, perennial hope that some day things would be different; some day one would have more time; some day life would smooth out and become less broken and haphazard; some day one would begin to be thrifty and systematic; in short, that some day one would do all praiseworthy and wonderful things?

"Next winter," we say, "I shan't have so many interruptions. I will accomplish more," and of course next winter brings its own interruptions.

"Next month," we say, "I will begin to save money; there won't be so many things coming up that I want and need." And, of course, next month the temptations to spend money are different but just as numerous as they were before.

"I used to think," a woman of thirty-five or forty said to me the other day, half in fun and half in genuine dismay, "that as I grew older I would find it easier to be good and unselfish and all that sort of thing. But it isn't the least bit easier; it's harder if anything. I guess I shall have to make a good hard effort right now if I'm ever going to be good."

Wise woman to have realized what so many of us come to the cloven hoof of life without finding out!

To be sure a miracle may happen and a wonderful change in character or opportunity may come to you or me, but it's nine thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine chances to one that the measure of today is the measure of tomorrow; that each of us has all the opportunity, all the time, all the ability today, that we will have tomorrow.

"Mama," is a drug that has ruined more careers than opium ever has. Our lazy hope in an illogically wonderful some day, is a will-o-the-wisp. It leads us into the bog of inertia and non-accomplishment, and then vanishes entirely and leaves us old and tired and without satisfaction or hope.

Do you want more time to do the things worth while?

Then take it today. That's the only way to get it.

Do you want to be systematic and efficient and make the most of your opportunities and abilities?

Today is the grandest time that ever happened for doing just that.

Do you hope some day to be more unselfish, more clean, more kind—in short, nearer to your idea of the measure of a man or woman?

My friend, you will never be any of these things if you wait until some day. Today is the accepted time.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am eighteen years old and in love with a gentleman. He used to call on me regularly for four months—that was six months ago. About a week ago my sister had a surprise party on me and invited him. He came and made a date for the following Thursday. He kept the date, but still I don't think he cares for me. What will I do?

You can't force any man to care, say "Oh, well, I guess we had better break up. You are getting tired of me coming to see you anyway aren't you?"

I don't think he means this, but just says it to have me tell him that I am not tired of him. What must I do? SORR PICKLES.

Stop fussing. But if you must "fuss," don't give him a chance to say it first.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1) What do you think of a girl who paints and powders and goes in bad company?

(2) How is a stamp put on a letter that is a sign of flirting? (3) I have combed my hair a half dozen ways and every time I have a lot of bangs hanging in my face and around the side. (4) What shall I do with them?

(5) Do long finger nails look better than short ones? (6) To wash the hair more than once every two weeks; will drown the roots? (7) Is cold cream better than borax for hands and face? (8) Can I dye steel ribbon black? How? (9) I have brown eyes and black eyebrows, real brown hair, somewhat dark skin; what am I? (10) What is the right height and weight for a girl of seventeen? (11) I am very cowardly and chicken-hearted. How can I get over this? (12) What is the difference between Mma. and Klee? (13) Is my letter addressed to you the same as everybody else's?

A LITTLE GIRL.

(1) I am sorry for her. (2) This is something that nice people don't need to know. (3) Part your hair where it covers the ears and put it in a couple of low coils at the back. Or put it in two braids and wind them about the head. (4) It's bad taste to have them too long or too short.

(5) Once in two weeks is often enough. (6) They do not have the same effect at all and are used for different things. Borax cleans and bleaches, but much use of it will harden and wrinkle the skin. Cold cream softens and smooths as well as cleans. (7) Yes. Buy a package of dye and follow directions. (8) You are a brunette. (9) It depends upon her general type. (10) Remember that God watches over you always and that you can rely upon Him keeping you safe as long as you use ordinary common sense and discretion. (11) Madame—pronounced Madam, with accent on second syllable. Mademoiselle—pronounced Mad-mo-zell, with the accent on last syllable. (12) Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a miss of twenty and will be married in September. Would a light gray suit and a white hat look neat? How should the bridesmaid dress and what color?

If you are going away immediately after the ceremony a tailored gray suit and tailored hat to match would be permissible. But why not wear a white dress, my dear? Every girl is entitled to be married in white. A white flannel or linen tailored suit would be pretty. The bride may wear any simple dress and any becoming color except the one worn by the bride. Her hat should match her dress.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I am very fond of a young man who seems to be fond of me, but sometimes when we have a little "fuss," he'll say "Oh, well, I guess we had better break up. You are getting tired of me coming to see you anyway aren't you?"

I don't think he means this, but just says it to have me tell him that I am not tired of him. What must I do? SORR PICKLES.

Efficiency in Housework

THAT the housekeeping of the future is going to be a vastly different thing from the housekeeping of the past, there is little doubt. Even where results cannot be improved upon, the method of getting these results will redound to the benefit of the one who gets them. For the very best brains and the very best research and knowledge the country has to offer are all being brought to bear upon the whole field of housekeeping. Inefficient means and methods are being weeded out. Hard work is carefully studied to see how it can be lightened. In fact, everything, little or big, within the domain of housekeeping is coming in for analysis and criticism. And so improvements are sure to arrive all along the line. So important has this movement become, that a congress of workers and those interested is now held annually. And to show the wide range of inquiry, here are some of the subjects discussed at this year's meeting.

The laundry problem was thoroughly overhauled. Two hundred questions were sent to colleges, hospitals, clubs and similar institutions and to certain private families and the answers keenly studied, in order to find what improvements could be suggested in laundry work. Incidentally many interesting side facts were evolved, one being that trained women as superintendents of laundries are much in demand; and another, that housekeepers greatly interfere with the routine of laundry work by sending their bundles late and then wanting them quickly.

So perhaps some of the laundry deficiencies we rail about are, after all, our own fault.

Another subject that was thoroughly discussed was the relation between the work of the home and the architecture of the house. To lighten the housekeeping work the floor plans of many a house need changing. This in many cases is, of course, impossible. But the discussion means that the houses of the future will be built differently. The old notion that the kitchen must be large and commodious is giving place to the idea of condensed space in the kitchen in order to save steps. The utilization of the wall space is being taken into account. Even the number of doors is now being considered, and also the height of the sink. A uniform height for the sink, as has been the rule, irrespective of the height of the worker, no longer holds good. The advisability of a butler's pantry is under consideration; also some way to shorten the distance from the kitchen to the front door.

In fact, every part of the house and of the work of the home-keeper is being thus minutely scrutinized.

And to secure the kind of help we want in our homes, improvements of this kind are necessary. We cannot get energetic, efficient people to work for us, while they must work in an inefficient way. Offer business-like conditions, business-like methods, and business-like tools, and a delightful change will soon be noted in the class of workers offering to help in the work of our homes.

it over with suet. When it is smoking hot put in the steak and turn every ten seconds.

If you like the flavor of onions on your meat slice one very thin and fry it lightly in the fat from the suet and then put in the steak. For steak smothered in onions, fry the latter very brown and keep them covered while you broil the steak. Place it on a hot platter, cover with the onions and then cover the whole with a well-fitting lid and let stand in a hot place five minutes that the meat may absorb the desired flavor.

DIET AND HEALTH HINTS

By DR. T. J. ALLEN

CURED BY A FAST.

In the Ladies' Home Journal for May, Miss Bertha Damaris Knobe tells how a bilious condition with tendency to "heart failure," of which a brother had died, and a disposition to resort to cyanide of potassium as a sure means of relief from her physical and mental ills, were overcome by a fifteen-days' fast. She had been warned by the head physician of a famous sanitarium, where she had spent a year without permanent benefit, that a fast would kill her, but she placed herself under the care of a physician who had experience in treatment by fasting and by careful supervision and judicious use of the various precautions to be used in a properly regulated fast, passed through the ordeal with satisfaction. She emphasizes the importance of proper mental surroundings, and the avoidance of friends who, though they know nothing about fasting, will advise and criticize. She advises any one who wishes to fast more than a day or two to have the same professional care that is deemed necessary in the ordinary medical or surgical treatment. The fast was broken on oranges, followed by an exclusive milk diet. Thirty pounds were added to her weight and "nature has begun to show her old sign of approval in the previously pale cheeks," and she "feels for the first time in her life the glow of abundant blood in her body."

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Voecker

And if some "wise person" could only patent a method by which such a woman could think she had committed suicide, and go through all the agonies without "achieving" the result, she would be a beneficiary of society.

The would-be suicide, as a rule, thinks too much about herself. She is a great self-pitier. She suffers intensely, it is true. But in most cases she could cure her suffering, or at least minimize it, by taking more thought of others' sorrows, and by filling her time with work that required concentration of mind and body.

The busy woman who guards her health seldom contemplates suicide. She shuns an attack of the blues, as she would any other disease. When she feels a wave of self-pity rolling up, she runs away from it before it can engulf her. She looks at the whole big tumbling world with a grin, and even though "sorrow" grips her—real sorrow, mind you, not the fancied kind—she stands up to it like a true woman, remembering that she is not the first to suffer, nor will she be the last, and that she has no right to put more sorrow into the world by her complaints or melancholy.

None of us wish for sorrow. But it is a truth that those who have known no heavy hours are not the ones we love best; not those who love us most, nor those in whose sympathy we find great comfort.

The sweetest smiles, the heartiest laughs, the finest understanding of our joys as well as our woes, come from those who have been through the Valley of the Shadow—they know how to appreciate the best of life in contrast to what they have borne of its crosses.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

MRS. WHITNEY says in one of her stories the two dearest things in housekeeping are butter and experience. Today we may add meat to change the list.

A CHAPTER ON MEATS.

A most delicious way of serving hamburger steak is to put the round steak through the chopper (don't buy it chopped, for you take all kinds of mixtures), add seasoning of pepper, salt and onion, if liked. Grease the broiler and put the meat in the form of a steak and broil. When cooked, pour over a quarter of a cup of cream to each pound of the meat; have the cream hot and well seasoned.

Breakfast Chicken.—Chop the pieces of chicken fine; have a little butter in a sauce pan. When melted, add a cup of cream, when hot stir in the chicken, season and serve on well buttered rounds of toast.

Beef Mireton.—Mince cold corned beef, season with pepper, chopped pickle, two minced hard cooked eggs; moisten with any gravy or white sauce at hand, cover with seasoned mashed potatoes and bake until brown.

Here are some suitable combinations to use with meats of various kinds, when left over, and it is desired to have a made-over dish:

Cold veal, rice stuffing, tomato sauce.

Lamb, mint sauce, or in stew with peas.

Mutton, macaroni, white or tomato sauce.

Beef, onions, potatoes, celery, brown sauce.

Chicken, rice, celery and white sauce.

Turkey, stuffing and giblet gravy for an escalloped dish.

Duck, minced olives, brown gravy and currant jelly.

Boiled ham, mustard, hard cooked eggs and white sauce.

Broiled liver, bacon, lemon juice and tomato sauce.

Veal, ham, horseradish and brown sauce.

Fish, stuffing and Hollandaise sauce. A very attractive breakfast dish is old-fashioned hash well seasoned, made in cakes and cooked, then serve with a poached egg on each. Garnish the platter with parsley.

CAINVILLE CENTER

Cainville Center, Sept. 6.—Mrs. Fred Gardner and children of Brodhead, visited relatives Monday and Tuesday.

All roads lead to the Evansville fair which is the center of attraction this week.

Chas. Bennett, wife and son of Vernon county, arrived at the parental home Tuesday night. They made the trip by auto, and report a very hard trip on account of the recent washouts in the northern part of the state.

Nellie Gardner is spending the week with friends in Evansville and attending the fair.

Quite a number of the farmers that raised tobacco, have sold their crop in the field. Some selling as high as 13 cents per pound. The weather has been very favorable for tobacco and has made a rapid growth.

MAKES A SURVEY OF JEFFERSON COUNTY PREHISTORIC WORKS

H. L. Skavlem of This City Engaged in Interesting Work For Wisconsin Archaeological Society.

A recent issue of the Jefferson County Union gives an account of work which is being done by H. L. Skavlem of this city in surveying the Indian mounds and village sites in Jefferson county. The article is given below:

Mr. H. L. Skavlem, of Janesville, has been making a survey for the Wisconsin Archaeological Society, of the prehistoric works in this county. The society is conducting a series of these surveys in various parts of the state, having been granted a modest sum by the last legislature for this purpose.

It will be remembered that Mr. Skavlem and Mr. Stout made a very exhaustive survey of the ancient works around Lake Koshkonong. In that survey, which was made about five years ago, they found nearly five hundred separate mounds or works, including nearly fifty effigy mounds, and located numerous ancient cornfields and village sites.

He is now engaged in similar work looking up and platting the more scattered works throughout the county. We acknowledge a very pleasant call from Mr. Skavlem and his young assistant, Alonzo Pond of Janesville, last Friday. On that day they platted eight mounds near Rock River on the Curt's & Knitans stock farm and located the site of an ancient village on these premises, beginning near the bridge and extending up the west bank of the river for a distance of half a mile.

The past week they surveyed and platted the several groups at Lake Ripley and one group at Rock Lake. Mr. Skavlem desires to learn of all other unplatted mounds or works and village sites in this or adjoining counties and upon the receipt of such information will come and plat them for the Society.

Mr. Skavlem is investigating the manufacture of prehistoric implements and in the near future will issue a bulletin on this subject.

As an indication of the work Mr. Skavlem is doing here we append the following excerpts from his report of his work at Lake Ripley as follows:

With Lapham's plat 29 "Antiquities of Wisconsin" (Smithsonian Contribution of Knowledge, Vol. VII, entitled "Sketch of the Ancient Works, Ripley Lake, surveyed in 1850, by I. A. Lapham, as guide, I commenced search for the figures there shown and described as on the north shore of the lake.

The very brief and indefinite description given by Lapham made it somewhat difficult to get a starting point until the "figure near the middle of the group in the attitude of defiance," was pointed out by Mrs. Cole, an old resident of the place.

The lack of any statement of scale of measurement of the drawings on the plate is apt to give a very erroneous idea of the relative location of these "works."

Valuable assistance by J. W. Porter, Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Lee, all old residents of the place and familiar with every nook and corner of the shores of the lake, greatly aided in the accurate location of these interesting mounds.

It is evident that Lapham figured these works more particularly as to their peculiar form or shape with but little regard to their relative size or location.

The shore of this lake has for a long time been a favorite summer resort and I expected to find most of the mounds obliterated to make room for the white man's playground. I am pleased to report that very few of these interesting monuments of the long forgotten past are entirely gone.

The huge "Lizard" is given a cozy place on the sunny side of Mrs. Cole's cottage and undoubtedly guards the little gasoline launch with the same fidelity that in bygone days the great state spirit protected the "Birch-Lark" of its red children.

A little farther down the shore to the South East the big cats of the primordial forest, in utter defiance of the white man's encroachments, hold their heads as high as they did, perhaps centuries before the axe made its first stroke at the heart of the giants of the forest. Unfortunately, one of the cats has lost a part of its once magnificent tail, but it is yet much more than a mere "bobcat."

No trace of the "bird" or the "elongated embankment" could be found in the locality indicated by these figures on the plate, and as the contour of this locality appeared to have been but little disturbed and our local assistants were positive that no mounds had been there since their first acquaintance with the locality, we began to doubt the accuracy of Mr. Lapham's plate. Perhaps the mounds down at "Cedar Lodge" might be the ones we were looking for, sure enough, following the shore to the southeast for nearly half a mile we came to the first mound and it is our missing "bird-mound" but with head and one wing gone. This is accounted for by trace of an old roadway that has worn away the head and the evident utilizing of the missing wing to fill the washout of the old driveway.

Some 90 feet to the southeast we have the long embankment, 120 feet long, tapering to its eastern end towards the shoreline having a width of about 35 feet, with indications that club end or head part has been removed at a hot very remote time, with several partial excavations on one side that gives the remaining part a crude or mutilated effigy appearance. The height near the larger end is about three feet.

Close by the side near the larger end on the south lies a small tumuli not over a foot high and some 10 feet in diameter.

Continuing in the same southeast direction from the long mound, about 300 feet, we find the large, oblong mound figured on Lapham's plate, close up to the northerly side of Cedar Lodge. This has undoubtedly been considerably modified by the building that encroaches upon its side, but still has an elevation of five feet and a length of 40 feet.

A small low tumuli 14 feet in diameter and about a foot high lies close to and south of the large porch-like extension of the Hotel, facing the lake shore.

Extending the same general line of these mounds in a southeasterly direction through the Cedar Lodge building and across the driveway on the southerly side we come to the well defined outline of a large lizard with a length of 40 feet, spread of 20 feet and deepest part of body about 6 feet. The greater part of the tail has been sacrificed for the driveway and kitchen, part of the hotel.

This was undoubtedly a fine effigy at the time Lapham made his survey but is not found on his plate, indicating that he was not plating the group, but showing the variety of types of "works" as he terms these mounds, having a lizard on the plate he did not duplicate the figure. The figure at the extreme left of the plate—a duplicate of the interesting mound on the Asylum grounds at Mendota, that was recently destroyed to enlarge the hospital potato patch was also located.

The discovery that the three figures on the right of the plate were not a part of the central group led to the inference that possibly the figure on the left was not in its relative position on the plate, but merely there to show its peculiar form.

Continuing westward along the north shore of the lake some 300 feet from the little tumuli hidden under Mrs. Cole's porch we were shown the remains of some kind of an Indian mound that had long been cut to pieces by the old roadway that skirted the lake shore. This showed the central part of the body had long been worn away by the roadway and the rest of the body should have been, now stands a handsome cottage. The occupant of the cottage was questioned and the information was gained that a mound was taken away in leveling the site for the building and human bones and Indian relics were found in the excavation. A faint outline of the mound still was easily traced on the lawn to the east of the cottage; this strongly verified by the difference in material. The tailridge being a yellowish clay while each side showed the black humus of the virgin top soil.

PRIMARY LAW DOES NOT MEET DEMANDS

Tuesday's Results Displeasing To The Average Politician Throughout State.

Even some of the warmest adherents of the primary law admit the peculiar situation presented to the voters in Wisconsin in Tuesday's primary election has led to a demand on the part of many for a change in the primary law, permitting the voter to vote for whom he pleases on any ticket. This should be in effect a change to the Oregon primary system, where such practice is permitted. Under the present primary law the voter must restrict himself to one party ticket, and is often put to a dilemma in making his choice. The fact that Gov. McGovern had no opposition in the primary and that the rivalry was unusually sharp in the democratic fight for governorship made many republicans indifferent about voting their own ticket or sent them into the democratic camp. Had McGovern and some of the other candidates for state offices in the primary had opposition a heavier republican vote would doubtless have followed.

State politicians of prominence who watched the working out of Tuesday's primary with more than usual interest admit that a number of bills to amend the present primary law will be introduced at the next legislature.

Some have wondered whether it would be practicable to combine the primary and the general election. They believe that if the primary law were amended so that the voter might vote for any candidate or any ticket then the general election would be practically unnecessary. They point out, too, that this would reduce the expense candidates are put to in making the run for public office. While this is considered a somewhat radical change in the election system in Wisconsin it is a fact that is being given serious consideration by politicians in progressive ranks who realize that the primary is not giving complete satisfaction.

Why Money Is Cheap.
"I want you to tell me what this paper means when it says in its market report that money is cheap," said Mrs. McFee to her husband, who, like all husbands, is supposed to be encyclopedic. McFee laid down the sporting sheet. "It's simply putting in a brief form the statements that money talks," he replied, "and that talk is cheap."—Judge's Library.

Arnold agreed to surrender the academy to Major Andre in exchange for some of England's best tuppence. He was to meet Andre at the front door with a look of great surprise and after firing several blank cartridges at him in an expostulatory vein was to surrender en masse and be given a trip pass to London.

On the night of September 23, 1780, Andre pinned a quit claim deed to West Point to his left, insolent and started on horseback to seize West Point with his bare hands. On the road, however, he met a couple of New York farmers who were of an inquisitive and prying nature, and they searched him with such deadly aim that they discovered his guilty secret by disrobing his feet.

Arnold escaped in a British vessel, but returned later and tried to burn down all of the Atlantic coast he could get to. After the war he engaged in light housekeeping in London and attempted to live down his past. There was too much of it, however, and whenever he went anywhere people would wit him about committing a faux pas, which is a French word meaning blunder. He died in London, owing several months' rent, and his funeral had the enthusiastic endorsement of all concerned.

BENEDICT ARNOLD.
(By Howard L. Rann.)

ONE hundred and thirty years ago this month Benedict Arnold tried to deliver the West Point military academy and all of its contents, including some haughty first class men and several unwashed and unrepentant plebes, into the hands of the British government.

He failed abjectly, with no visible assets, and that is why we are here today, living happily and contentedly under the benign rule of J. P. Pierpont Morgan, rather than being bossed around by a King who none of us had ever been introduced to.

Benedict's work as a traitor was very coarse. He had got mad at George Washington because George refused to make him a brigadier general, which was something Benedict knew he was cut out for, every time he looked in the glass. So he arranged with Major Andre to ship West Point to him one dark night, when nobody was looking.

Arnold agreed to surrender the academy to Major Andre in exchange for some of England's best tuppence. He was to meet Andre at the front door with a look of great surprise and after firing several blank cartridges at him in an expostulatory vein was to surrender en masse and be given a trip pass to London.

On the night of September 23, 1780, Andre pinned a quit claim deed to West Point to his left, insolent and started on horseback to seize West Point with his bare hands. Rich Men's Children

Her two predominant sensations were rage and triumph. It deepened her detestation of the Ryans, and at the same time gave her a sense of intimacy with them. And it showed her her power. Standing in the middle of the room with her eyes still staring at the now motionless portiere strands, she saw, stretching away into a limitless gilded distance, her negotiations with her husband's family. If their desire to rupture the marriage took them thus far, where might it not take them?

It was not the Ryans alone who wanted to buy her off. It was the Cannons as well. They not only wanted Dominick to get rid of her; they wanted him to get rid of her so that he could marry Rose Cannon. The other girl was behind it all, accounted for the participation of the Bonanza King, accounted probably for the whole move—the pink and white girl in the French clothes who had all her life had everything and now wanted Berny Iverson's husband.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Moonlight Night.

A few nights after this, there was a full moon. Dominick, walking home from the bank, saw it at the end of the street's vista, a large, yellowish-plank disk floating up into the twilight. The evening was warm, like the early summer in other climates; and Dominick, walking slowly and watching the great yellow sphere deepening in color as it swam majestically upward, thought of evenings like this in the past when he had been full of the joy of life and had gone forth in the spirit of love and adventure.

The determination to accept his fate which had been with him on his return from Antelope had of late been shaken by stirrings of rebellion. Uplifted by the thought of his love for a woman hopelessly removed from him, but who would always be a lodestar to worship reverently and to guide him up difficult paths, he had been able to face his domestic tragedy with the high resolution of the martyr. But this exalted condition was hard to maintain in the friction of daily life with Berny.

To-night, the period of ill humor seemed over. Berny was not only once again her animated self, she was almost feverishly garrulous.

Fearful of angering her, or, still worse, of arousing her suspicions, Dominick bore her talk with all the fortitude he had, but he rose from the table with every nerve tingling, rasped and galled to the limit of endurance.

He did not come into the den immediately, but roamed about, into the parlor, down the passage, and into his own room.

"Aren't you coming into the den?" she called, as she heard him pacing steadily along the passageway.

"No," he called back. "The moonlight's shining in at every window. It makes me restless. I don't feel like sitting still."

She sat on the divan, a paper spread before her face, but her eyes were slanted sidewise, unblinking in the absorption of her attention. Suddenly she heard a rattling sound which she knew to be from the canes and umbrellas in the hat-rack. She cast away the paper, and drawing herself to the edge of the divan, peered down the passage. Dominick was standing by the hat-rack, his hat on the back of his head, his hand feeling among the canes.

"You've got your hat on," she called in a high key of surprise. "You're not going out?"

"Yes, I am," he answered, drawing out the cane he wanted. "It's a fine night, and I'm going for a walk."

Outside, Dominick walked slowly, keeping to the smaller and less frequented streets. It was a wonderful night, as still as though the moon had exerted some mesmeric influence upon the earth.

He walked on, skirting the hollow, and moving forward through streets where old houses brooded in overgrown gardens.

That part of California Street which crested the hill was but a few blocks beyond him, and before his mind would acknowledge it, his feet had borne him that way. He thought only to pass the Cannon house, to look at its windows, and see their lights. As it rose before him, a huge, pale mass checkered with shadows, the longing to see it—the outer shell that hid his heart's desire—passed into a keener, concentrated agitation that seemed to press out from his soul like a cry to her.

The porch yawned black behind pillars that in the daytime were painted wood and now looked like temple columns wrought in marble. Dominick's glance, sweeping the lines of yellowed windows, finally rested on this cavern of shadow, and he approached stealthily, as a robber might, his body close to the iron fence. Almost before his eyes had told him, he knew that a woman was standing there, leaning against the balustrade that stretched between the columns. A climbing rose spread in a motting of darkness, over the wall beside her. Here and there it was starred with the small white faces of blossoms. As the young man drew near she leaned over the balustrade, plucked one of the blossoms, and, slowly shredding the leaves from the stem, stretched out her hand and let them fall, like a languid shower of silver drops, to the grass.

She bent over the balustrade to look at them, and in doing so, her eyes encountered the man below.

For a moment they looked at each other without speaking, then she said, her voice at the lowest note that would reach him:

"What are you doing there?"

"Watching you."

"Have you been standing there long?"

"No, only a few minutes. Why are you pulling the roses to pieces?"

She gave a little laugh and said something that sounded like "I don't know," and moved back from the balustrade.

He thought she was going and clutched the iron spikes of the fence, calling up to her in a voice of urgent feeling, curiously out of keeping with the words, the first remark that came into his head:

"This is very different from Antelope, isn't it?"

"Yes," she said gravely, "we had no moonlight there, nothing but storms and gray clouds."

"Well, I must go in. The roses are all picked and papa'll be wondering where I am."

It seemed to Dominick just then that he could not lose her. She must stay a moment longer. Urgency that was imploring was in his voice as he said:

"Don't go! don't go! Stay just one moment longer! Can't you come down and talk for a minute?"

She listened, wavered, and was won over. Without answer she turned from the shadow of the porch into the light on the top of the steps, and from there slowly descended, her skirt gathered in one hand, and the other touching the balustrade.

"I've wanted so to see you. I came by to-night hoping that perhaps I could catch a glimpse of your shadow on the curtain. I didn't expect anything like this."

He stopped, looking at her, and not listening to the few words of her answer.

"I think I wanted you so that my will called you out," he said in an impassioned whisper.

She said nothing and suddenly his hand sought hers, clasped it tight on the head of the lion, and he whispered again:

"Oh, Rose, if I could see you now and then—only for a moment like this."

He felt her hand, small and cold, crush softly inside his, and almost immediately was conscious of her effort to withdraw it. He instantly loosened his fingers, let hers slide from his grasp, and drew back.

"Good night," she said hurriedly, and without looking at him turned and went up the steps.

It was a great morning for Cornelia. She was engaged. Two evenings before, Jack Duffy, who had been hovering round the subject for a month, pulled above it, as a hawk above a lighted prey, had at last descended and Cornelia's anxieties were at an end.

The wind was not yet out in force; its full, steady sweep would not be inaugurated till early in the afternoon. It came now in gusts which fell upon Cornelia from the back and accelerated her forward progress, throwing out on either side of her a flapping sail of skirt. Cornelia, who was neat and precise, usually resented this rough handling, but to-day she only laughed, leaning back, with one hand holding her hat.

It was after midday when she found herself approaching that particular block, along the edge of which the flower-vendors place their baskets and display their wares. The boys and men, seeing that the brilliant lady was in a generous mood, collected about her, shouting out the excellences of their particular blossoms, and pressing sample bunches on her attention.

Cornelia, amused and somewhat bewildered, looked at the faces and bought recklessly.

"Well, Cornelia, are you trying to corner the curb-stone market?"

She wheeled swiftly and saw her brother, laughing and looking at the stacked flowers in the crook of her arm.

"Dominick!" she exclaimed, "you're just the person I want to see. I was going to write to you. I've got lots to tell you."

"Come along then and take lunch with me. I was on my way up to Bertrand's when I saw you. They'll give us a good lunch there and you can tell me all your secrets."

They walked up the street toward Bertrand's, a French restaurant which for years had enjoyed the esteem of the city's gourmets.

In the restaurant they found a vacant table in a corner, and Cornelia had to bottle up her good news while Dominick pondered over the bill of fare. She was impatient and drummed on the table with her fingers, while her eyes roamed about the room.

The order given and the first stages of lunch appearing, Cornelia could at last claim her brother's full attention.

"I told you how awfully anxious I was to see you, and how I was going to write to you didn't I?"

Her brother looked up and his eye was caught by her rosy-blushing cheeks.

"Dear me, Cornie," he said with a look of slowly-dawning comprehension. "It really isn't—it really can't be."

"And why can't it be?" looking very much hurt. "What's there so queer about that?"

"Nothing, only I meant that I hadn't heard any rumors about it. Is it that?"

"Yes, it is, Dominick Ryan, and I don't see why you should be so surprised."

"Surprised! I'm more than surprised. I'm delighted—haven't been so pleased for years. Who is it?"

"Jack Duffy."

"Oh, Cornie, that's the best yet! That's great! It's splendid. I wish I could kiss you, but I can't here in the open restaurant. Why didn't you tell me somewhere where we would be alone? I'd just like to give you a good hug."

Cornelia leaned across the table and spoke with low-toned, almost tremulous earnestness:

"You know that if it were I, I'd ask your wife. You know that all the hard feelings I may once have had against her have gone. If it were for me to say, I'd have received her from the start. What I've always said is, 'What's the good of keeping up these fights? No one gets anything by them. They don't do any one any good.' But you know no more. The first thing she said when we talked about the house wedding, and I said you'd give me away, was, 'If he'll come without his wife.'"

There were tears in her eyes and Dominick saw them and looked down at his plate.

"All right," he said quietly. "I'll come. When is it to be?"

"June," said the prospective bride, once more beginning to blush and beam, "early in June. The roses are so fine then, and we can have the house so beautifully decorated."

With a scraping of chair legs, they rose and, threading their way among the now crowded tables, passed out into the wind-swept streets. Here they separated, Cornelia, with her armful of willing flowers, going home, and Dominick back to the bank.

Two hours later, while he was still bending over his books, in the hushed seclusion of the closed building, Bill Cannon was talking to Berny in the parlor of the Sacramento Street flat. This interview was neither so long, and (on Berny's part) did not show the self-restraint which had marked the first one. The offer of one hundred thousand dollars which the old man made her was refused with more scorn and less courtesy than had been displayed in her manner on the former occasion.

Overlooked.

"Very few mosquitoes taste anything but the juice of tender plants," remarked the naturalist. "Is that so?" exclaimed Farmer Courtessell. "It kind of looks as if human beings hadn't been properly advertised as mosquito food."

Very Few Copperheads.
The copperhead, although deadly venomous, seldom attains a length of more than three feet, and is, fortunately, not plentiful, comparatively few people having ever seen one. Its favorite habitat is a rocky, mountainous woodland, and never an open meadow.

Monarch

Light Touch

THE extremely light action of the Monarch Typewriter endears it to all operators who use it.

The typist who takes pride in her position finds great satisfaction in being able to turn out as much work, and as good work, per hour, toward the end of the working day as during the morning. Other conditions being the same, she can always do this on a Monarch. There is:

"No Three O'Clock Fatigue"

for users of this machine. The mechanical reason for the Monarch light touch is found in the action of the Monarch type bar, an exclusive and patented feature which gives this remarkably light touch.

We would remind the business man that Monarch light touch means more work and better work, because less physical strength is expended by the operator. Therefore, cost per folio is reduced, making the Monarch a business economy.

SEND FOR MONARCH LITERATURE

Then try the Monarch, and be convinced that Monarch merit rests in the machine itself, not merely in what we tell you about it.
